CONGRESSMAN HELM HITS THE BULLS EYE

IN SPEECH ON RECIPROCITY AND FARMERS' FREE LIST IN HOUSE LAST WEEK.

Congressman Helm made a great hit last week with his speech in the House on Reciprocity and Farmers' Free List bill. He paid a fitting tribute to Deek, Carlisle and Breckinridge, and to Watterson, Blackburn and McCreary—"Masters of the old Kentucky Democratic tariff school," and placed the "Star-eyed Goddess of Reform" once more before the footlights. He demonstrated that the tariff did not increase the price of farm products, cited the President, the secretary of Agriculture and other republican authorities as recent converts to the old democratic doctrine that the surplus fixed the price of farm products. He described the new republican doctrine of a tariff to cover cost of production and fair profit as the same old dose of protection for infant industries with a sugar coating. He said that the position of those high priests of protection, Cannon, Mann and Dalzell, was as much a danger signal to him as the red light on the railroad track was to the engineer.

He produced first hand evidence to show that the freight rates from Canadian points to Central Kentucky points were an insurmountable protection to Kentucky, and showed that the balance of trade on farm products with Canada was overwhelmingly in our favor. He told why the beef packers opposed the bill, and sent their agents as walking delegates among the cattle-ransers in opposition to the bill. He showed by accurate data that exports of farm products are so far in excess of imports that the tariff could not affect the price of the broad statement that, with rare exceptions, the surplus of such products controlled the price, and that freight rates from Canadian points was an insurance to Kentucky farmers against lower prices in the market as compared with Canadian competition. That the cost of labor in Canada and here are practically the same, that at Winnipeg the market price of wheat was higher than at Chicago.

Discussing The Farmers' Free List bill, he demonstrated how manufacturers could apply the tariff as a profit with mathematical accuracy, and act in concert with military discipline to control the price and output, while the farmer helpless to organize to control either output, quality or price of his products, was completely at the mercy of the manipulations of the board of trade over the enactment of the Farmers' Free List bill would make possible a total annual saving of $75,000,000, to the farmer on a bill of the principal items made free of duty by the bill, and said that in his opinion, the data, if it could be obtained would show that the enactment of the bill would make a total annual saving to the consumer of one hundred million dollars.
